Symphonic Space

“There is only one medium in art and that is ‘thinking’. Visual art as a universal language that can be learned through the action of it, and as such its cultural usage reflects society’s psychological morality and mindset.

The drawings, painting and sculptures challenge accepted notions of concrete image-making, fixed viewpoints, the self as the center of the cosmos, classical pictorial perspective, colour as theory, the role of negative and positive spaces, and the observer’s autonomy in the picture plane.

The works are up-tempo abstracted spatial explorations in a cacophony of colour cadences, multilayered dimensions, looping and diving calligraphic line, and shifting shapes and forms – the logic of the eye and mind in complete harmony... the child state.”
