...And so she sat down to write about the person she was and why she was so attracted to her own life, her own existence.

“
Firstly, I can confidently say with a smile that I paint following my feelings and emotions, not trends. It's ironic to think that a journey so deeply emotional, spiritually nurturing as well as totally generous would and could enrich the soul with so much intensity.
'I couldn't think of much else as a child'... described by my father as a girl living in fantasy land.

The “love of my life” started here - a Bachelor of Art, majoring in Graphic Design at Ballarat University. Then my journey as a Designer began. It included a few years in advertising in Melbourne. However, I knew it wasn't really for me. So I took a leap of faith, not knowing where I would land although confident enough to do just that.

My painting styles have varied over the years, as they do while you grow. Within time I had many solo exhibitions and began winning awards all over Melbourne.

I always knew there was something extra I could be doing, which led me to teaching art to others. I enjoy this immensely. I conduct workshops from my studio & private gallery in Melbourne. My teaching takes me across the world with invitations to conduct workshops in the most spectacular and spiritually awakening destinations - Amalfi Coast, Venice & Tuscany Italy, France, California USA and Austria.

I have also had the wonderful opportunity to appear as feature artist on the TV show 'Colour In Your Life' which is another amazing highlight along my artistic journey.

I have featured in many publications and interviews here in Australia and internationally. My artwork inc commissions is shipped to private collectors all over the world.

Living life surrounded by all kinds of beauty... some with heartbeats.
How do you describe a feeling that has so much intensity that it wraps you up with an exclusive, detailed, analytical presence that you feel as one and nothing else matters!

Would that be described as the love of your life?
